

The Danelaw Treaty of York

This sacred treaty establishes peaceful coexistence between the Norse warriors of the North and the Saxon kingdoms of England. Both parties recognize their mutual strength and commit to a new era of trade, cultural exchange, and mutual respect.

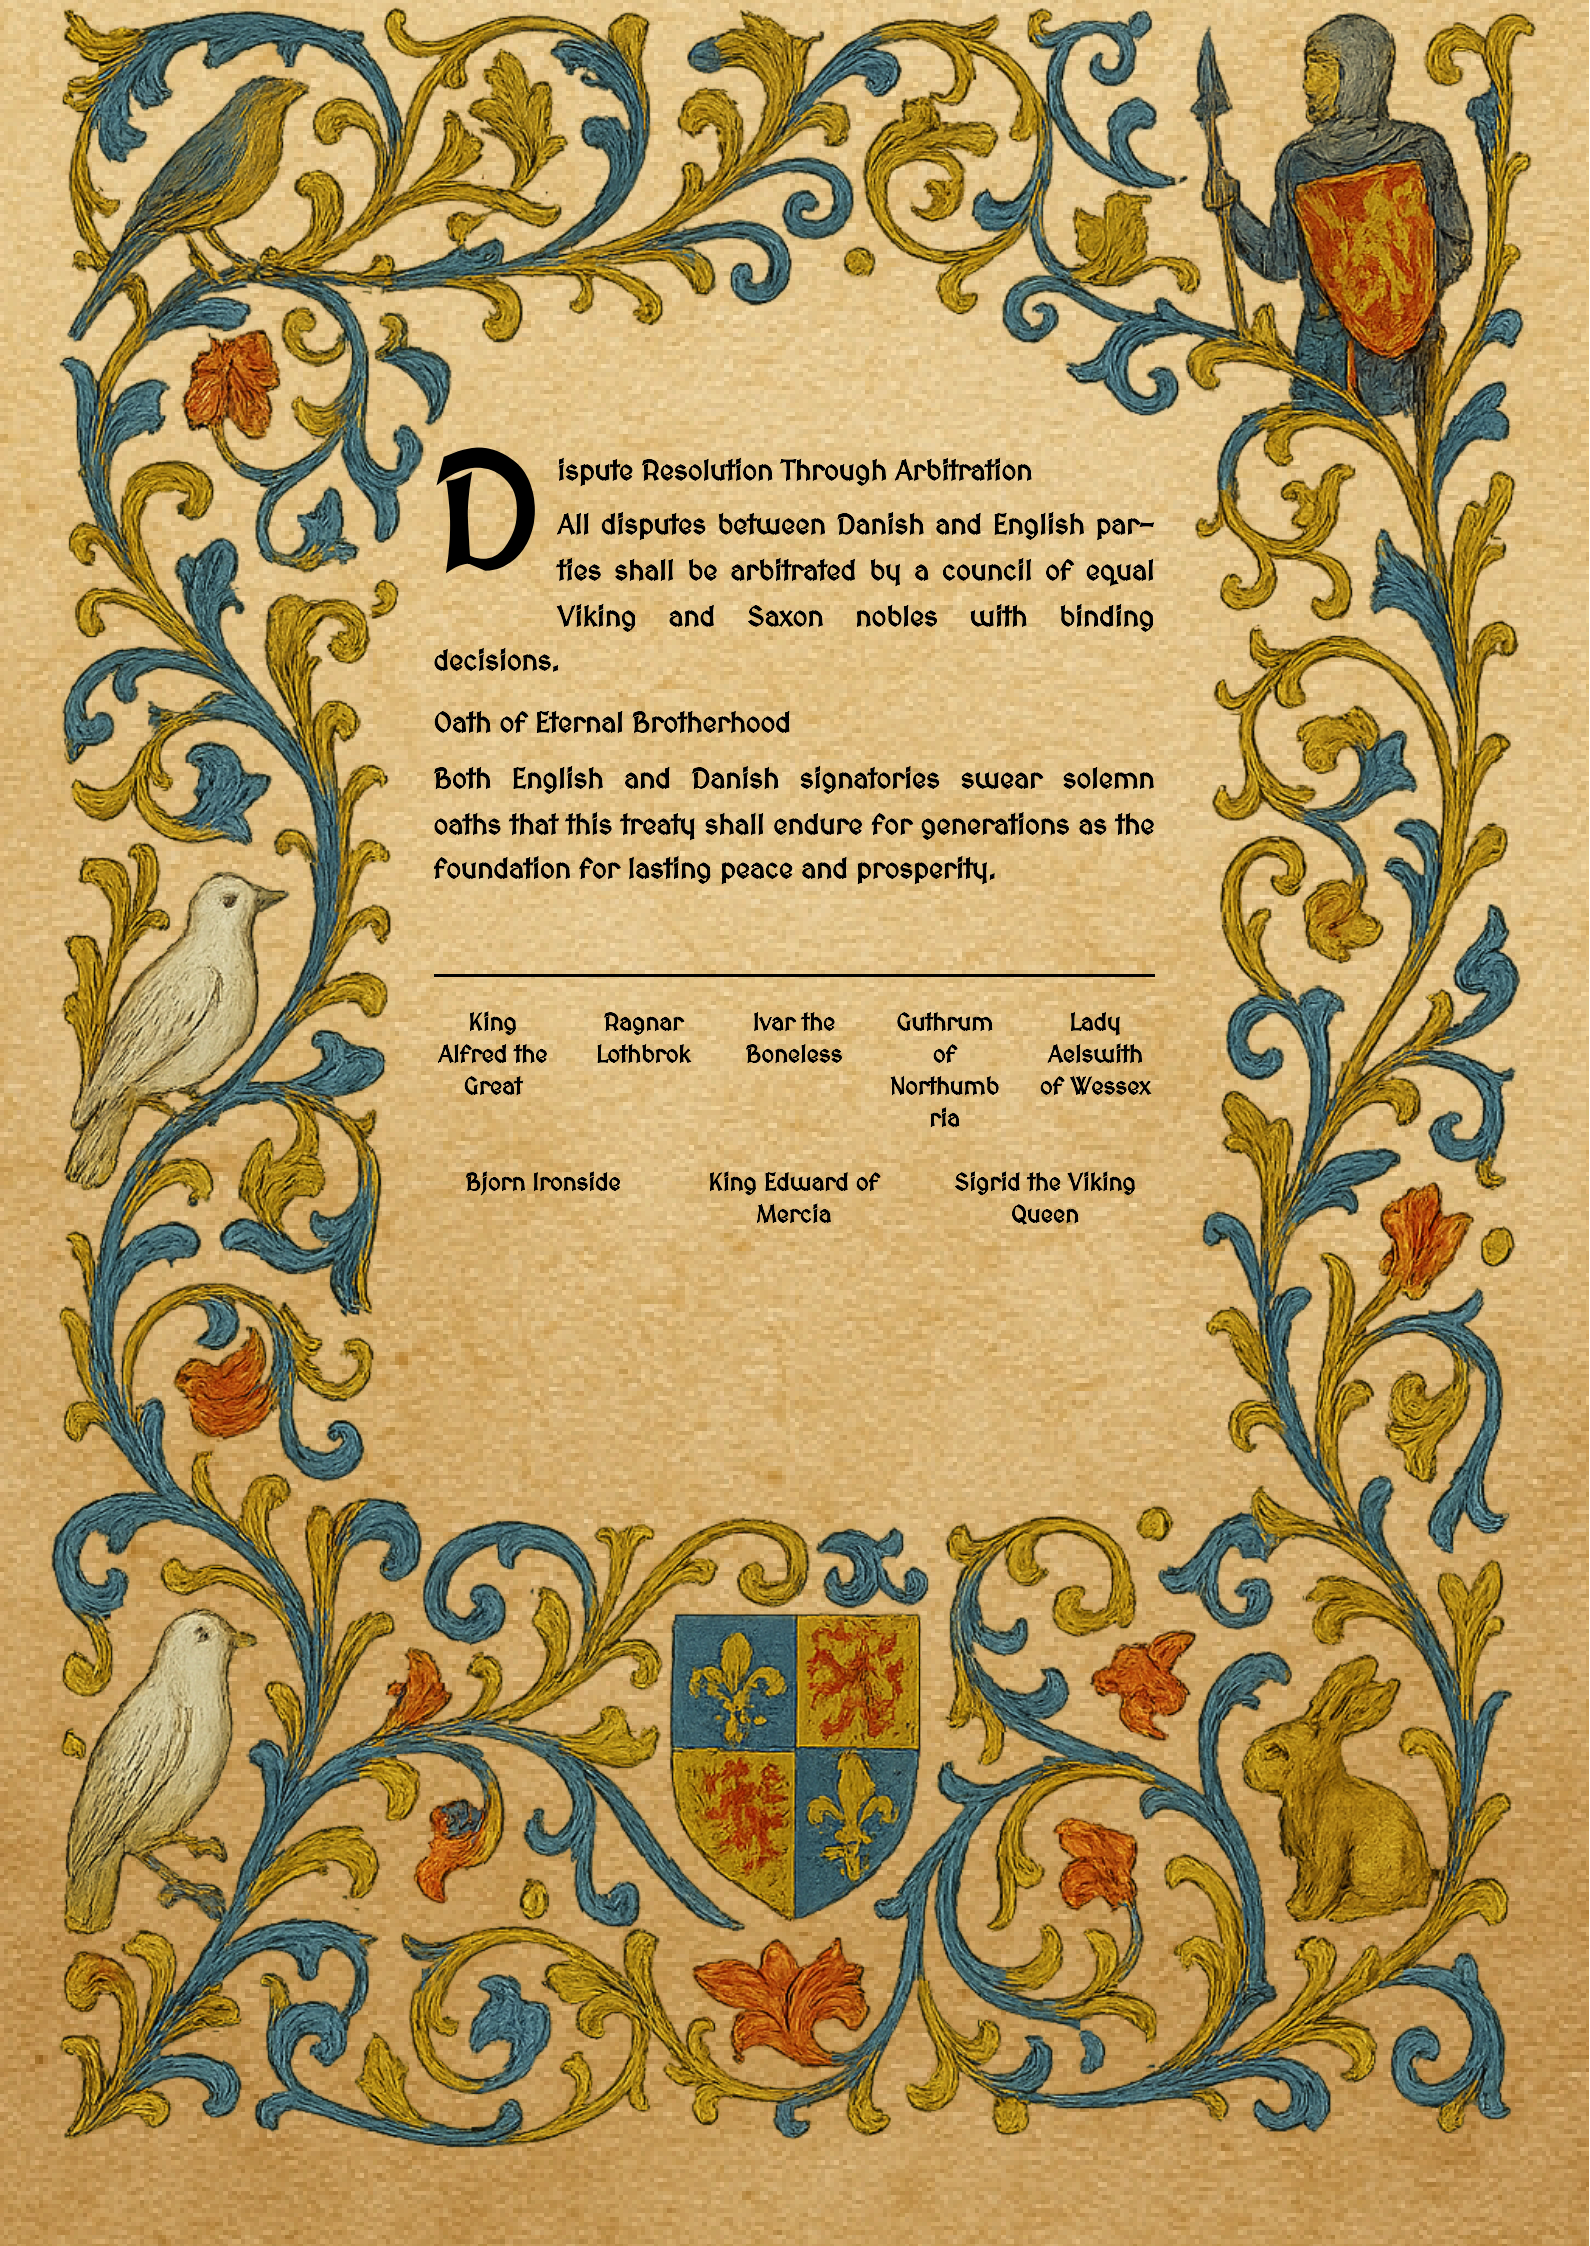

Military Alliance Against External Threats
English and Danish forces shall stand united as brothers in arms when defending the island against external invasion or foreign threats.

Protection of Religious Practices

The Norse shall be free to worship Odín and Thor while English kingdoms maintain their Christian churches without forced conversions or interference.

Border Fortifications and Strategic Defense

The boundary between Danelaw and English territories shall be fortified with mutually agreed strongholds garrisoned equally by both nations.

Dispute Resolution Through Arbitration
All disputes between Danish and English parties shall be arbitrated by a council of equal Viking and Saxon nobles with binding decisions.

Oath of Eternal Brotherhood

Both English and Danish signatories swear solemn oaths that this treaty shall endure for generations as the foundation for lasting peace and prosperity.
